Do you sometimes feel unsure of how to express your feelings and needs to others? Do you find it frustrating realizing that you seem to feel easily hurt by what your partner says to you but somehow feel stuck? To people in a romantic relationship or those that desire to have one, feeling emotionally safe is often one of the keys to establishing trust, which is essential in relationships, because without mutual trust, showing our authentic self and building deeper connections may just be impossible. But what it really means to feel emotionally safe? What does it take to foster a sense of security with ourselves and others? Come to this mental health speech to learn more about ourselves and how to take our relationship with others to the next level!
